Palm Springs, CA (PRWeb via PR Web Direct) February 23, 2006– DPPpress (www.dpppress.com) and DigitalPulp Publishing (www.digitalpulppublishing.com), a year-old epublishing company, launched their online bookstore on January 1 of this year. The DPPstore (www.dppstore.com) is thrilled to introduce its latest addition to its eShelves, Letters from the Battlefield, written by Jerry Countess and published by Jaysea Publishing (ISBN: 978-1-933746-00-5).

Letters from the Battlefield is a memoir of Countess' journey across the battlefields of North Africa, Sicily and Italy. Through poignant letters to his sweetheart back home, he reveals the hardships, heartbreaks, and even the laughter of the battlefields. It is a story of a boy becoming a man and a testament to the strength of love...Near or far it can see us through.

"Jerry Countess has written a marvelous book," says author, Mitch Phillips. "It keeps your interest from the first page to the last. It is a coming of age story under the most extreme circumstances war can provide, yet it is written with sensitivity and humor, and makes you glad his wife saved those letters."

Jerry Countess enlisted in the Army in 1942, receiving the Silver Star, Bronze Star, Purple Heart, Combat Infantryman's Badge and six stars on his EAME campaign medal before his discharge in 1945. Since that time he has studied writing at New York University, worked in business and communications, and is a published author.
